READING (18 points)

Task 1. Read the first part of an article. In items 1-10 identify if the statements are True (T) or False (F).

Culture Shock

Saying Tamara Blackmore experienced culture shock when she arrived here last September is an understatement. It was more like culture trauma for this adventurous student who left Melbourne’s Monash University to spend her junior year at Boston College (BC). Blackmore, 20, was joined at BC by 50 other exchange students from around the world. Like the thousands of exchange students who enroll in American college each year, Blackmore discovered firsthand there is a sea of difference between reading about and experiencing America firsthand. She felt the difference as soon as she stepped off the plane.

As soon as she landed in Boston, Blackmore could feel the tension in the air. She was about to taste a lifestyle far more hectic than the one she left. “Driving in Boston is crazy,” says Blackmore. “It took me a while to get used to the roads and the driving style here. I was always afraid someone was going to hit me. It was particularly tricky since the steering wheel was on the wrong side of the car. In Australia it’s on the right side.”

Beyond the cars and traffic jams, Blackmore said it took a while to get used to so many people in one place, all of whom seemed like they were moving at warp speed. “There are only 18 million people in Australia spread out over an entire country,” she says, “compared to more than six million people in the state of Massachusetts alone. We don’t have the kind of congestion you have in Boston. There is a whole different perception of space.”

The pressing problem for Tamara was making a quick adjustment to the American lifestyle that felt like it was run by a stopwatch. For this easygoing Australian, American seemed like perpetual-motion machines. “Americans are very time-oriented,” she says. “Everything is done according to a schedule. They’re always busy, which made me feel guilty about wanting to just sit around and occasionally watch television. Australians, on the other hand, value their leisure time. The pace there is a lot slower because we don’t feel the need to always be busy. It’s not that Australians are lazy, it’s just that they have different concept of how time should be spent. Back home, I used to spend a lot of more time just talking to my friends.”

1. Tamara Blackmore passed through very strong emotions after arriving to America.
2. It is possible to say that Miss Blackmore is rather a cautious person.
3. To experience another culture firsthand is absolutely not the same to experience it via some information sources.

4. American lifestyle is much more restless than the one in Australia.
5. Miss Blackmore could not adjust herself to Boston's traffic.
6. We can conclude, according to Tamara's words, that Australia is thinly populated.
7. For Miss Blackmore Americans seemed to be equivalents of eternal engines.
8. There was quite easy for the Australian exchange student to spend her free time at her own pace.
9. Tamara stated that people living in the southern hemisphere country are not so hardworking as Americans.
10. Attitude toward the time of Tamara in America and Tamara in Australia would be pretty the same.

Task 2. Read the second part of an article. For questions 11-18 choose the best option A, B, C or D.

It didn't take long for Blackmore to adjust to American rhythms. "I felt the pressure to work harder and do more because everyone was running around doing so much," she says. When BC students weren't huddled over books, Blackmore found it odd that they were compulsively jogging, running, biking or doing aerobics in order to be thin. "Compared to home, the girls here are very skinny," she says. "Before I got here, I heard a lot of stories about the pressure to be thin and that many young American women have eating disorder."

But it's BC's laid-back and friendly learning environment that sets it apart from her Melbourne college experience. "Generally speaking, learning facilities are a lot better in Boston. In Australia, students and teachers have little contact outside the classroom. It's formal and depersonalized relationships. You social life and your school life are separate," she says.

It's just opposite at BC, according to Blackmore. "BC students and faculty are like one big happy family. There is a real sense of team spirit. It's like we're all in this together. Going to school here is a lifestyle, whereas at home we're just a number."

When Blackmore returns to Australia at the end of the school year, she'll have plenty of memories, most of them are good ones. BC, like most American colleges, has gone out of its way to create a memorable experience for Blackmore and its other exchange students.
