Aneel posted a message on a website which gives work and career advice to young people. For Questions 1 –5, read his message and write T if the statements below are true and F if they are false. Write your answers in boxes 1-5 on your Answer Sheet.

Example:  There are both good and bad aspects to Aneel's job.

Answer:

Subject: Time to escape?

The problem I have is that my job is very well paid, but I find it really boring.

I work in computers, as a programmer, and I've had the job since I left college when I was 19. I had the chance to go to university then, but I saw an advert for this job and I thought it sounded perfect for me. I've always liked working with computers – I got my first one when I was nine years old – and at the age of 19 the money they were offering was too good to ignore, so I applied for the job and got it.

That was three years ago, so I'm 22 now and a bit worried because, although the money is still great, I really don't want to be in the same job, in the same office, for the rest of my life! I bought a flat last year, when I was still enjoying my job, but now I think I'd like to do something different. Money isn't a problem because even after buying my flat I've still got a lot of savings, so I was thinking about going away for a few months, perhaps to South America. I don't want to sell my flat, but I could rent it out to someone while I was travelling. Has anyone else been in a similar situation to this? I feel like I need some advice.

(Aneel, Nottingham)

1. Aneel was interested in computers before he got his job.
2. Aneel's salary is lower now than it was when he started.
3. Aneel feels differently about his job than he did a year ago.

4. Buying a flat used up most of Aneel's savings.
5. Aneel doesn't like the idea of someone else living in his flat.

Answer: a)

Although more than 50% of the world's population now live in cities, more and more Londoners are abandoning their urban lives and getting back to nature. Our reporter Anna Surtis investigates why.

Selling your house in the city and escaping to a new life in the countryside was always something people traditionally tended to do 0_____, when the attractions of an urban lifestyle became less and less obvious. 6_____, however, many younger people – professionals in their thirties and forties – have now decided to do the same thing, and are hoping to find a better quality of life closer to nature. In fact, recent studies have shown that more than 80% of people in towns and cities 7_____, and the biggest group of people moving to the countryside consists of people between 30 and 40. One property expert told us, “It is now common for people who have reached their early 30s to start wanting a better quality of life. They’ve had a stressful job for ten years or more, 8_____, and now that they have young families they are looking for somewhere to live which is safer, healthier and often significantly cheaper.”

I met one young couple, Kim Turner and Rajesh Patel, 9_____ and used the money to buy a much larger house in the village of Lawsley, 40 miles away. Kim and Rajesh admit that 10_____, but they, and thousands of others like them, have reached a point in their lives where they have realised that there is more to life than parties and fast living.

- a) Attracted by the excitement of city life
- b) Exhausted and stressed by city life

7

- a) would rather live a quieter, slower life
b) don't mind the pollution and traffic in cities

8

- a) they've made some money
b) they have a very relaxed lifestyle

9

- a) who have lived in London for over ten years
b) who have just sold their flat in central London

10

- a) there are things they might miss about the city
b) they don't like parties very much
