Most haunted places in England

There's more to England's historic buildings than meets the eye. While many now welcome visitors daily, some have their own paranormal visitors that call them home.

A) St Briavels Castle

St. Briavels Castle is often referred to as the most haunted castle in the UK. Today, it is used as a youth hostel, but with high levels of paranormal activity reported, it may not be the best choice for getting a good night's sleep! Some of the strange things that have happened there include hearing the cries of a baby coming from King John's Bedroom, while other visitors have felt their clothes being pulled by unseen hands. Ghostly figures spotted at the castle include a black dog who wanders the rooms, a grey lady at the top corridor and a knight walking the castle's grounds. Some guests of the hostel have even left midway through their stay because they felt an uneasy presence in their room.

B) Tower of London

With a history so rich, you'd expect a few ghosts lurking around the Tower of London. There have been many reports of paranormal activity in the tower over the years, with some even claiming to see apparitions of former kings and queens. Visitors have described meeting the ghosts of two young princes — most likely, Edward and Richard who mysteriously disappeared in around 1483. The boys are often sighted in the White Tower. Another spirit said to live in the tower is the headless ghost of Queen Anne Boleyn, poor Henry VIII's wife.

C) Whitby Abbey

Whitby may be best known as the inspiration for Bram Stoker's Dracula, but there is more linking this northern fishing village to the paranormal than just vampires. In fact, Whitby is said to be home to at least 12 evil-looking beings. According to popular belief, if you look into the well at Whitby Abbey at midnight, you'll face one of two fates. Those with a pure heart will see the face of St. Hilda, while those without are believed to be swept away by the devil.

Read the text about a game.

Dungeons & Dragons (or just D&D) is a role-playing game. It is normally played indoors with the participants seated around a table. Typically, one player takes on the role of Dungeon Master (DM), while the others control the fantasy characters (elves, dwarves, wizards etc.) with special skill sets.

The game consists of a series of adventures created by the DM. The players go through them by rolling the dice, using logic, imagination and each other's help. The results of the players' actions and the overall story line for the game are determined by the DM according to the rules and the DM's interpretation of them.

D&D is a very imaginative game where you can explore an open fantasy world with your friends. The only items needed to play are the rulebook, character sheets and dices with many sides.

Would you like to play this game?

Write a short abstract using the plan:
