PART 1

LISTENING

10 MINUTES

Task 1. Listen to the native English speaker and teacher Conner speaking about living abroad, and decide whether the statements (1–6) are TRUE according to the text you hear, or FALSE.

1. The speaker calls himself an expert on living abroad. True / False
2. Settling in a new country is fairly daunting. True / False
3. Nervousness is a negative aspect of moving abroad. True / False
4. It is advisable not to learn the language of the country you're arriving in. True / False
5. The worst part of moving abroad is separating from the people you hold dear. True / False
6. Having moved to a new country, the speaker found it hard to get used to others being late. True / False

Task 2. Listen to the same monologue and fill in the gaps (7–12) according to the audio. Write only one word.

7. "...this one's a no-_____: it's not easy to..."
8. "...like _____ noise in the background..."
9. "...it can hit you like a _____..."
10. "...it's more like giant _____..."

PART 2

READING

30 MINUTES

Read the text below and do the tasks after it.

The hot game on TikTok: Guessing locations on Google Maps

Picture a dirt road. The reddish brown soil in front of you has been packed down by traffic. On the opposite side of the road, wooden stakes fence the border. Stretching into the street, you can see the shadow of a fern that's barely out of frame. It's a nondescript dirt road, the kind you might find anywhere in the world.

"This is very much Brazilian dirt," says Trevor Rainbolt, glancing at just that scene from his computer in Los Angeles. He zooms into a map of the world, mousing over to South America. "Northeast Brazil, probably?" he adds. Rainbolt drops a pin and submits his answer. His guess is roughly 480 kilometers from the exact coordinates, a bit closer toward the Atlantic but still in northeast Brazil. 11) .....

For a little more than a year, Rainbolt, a 23-year-old online video producer, has been playing GeoGuessr, a trivia game powered by Google Maps. The objective of GeoGuessr is simple: players are placed in a location on Google Maps' Street View, and they're able to navigate around the map to gather clues to guess where exactly they are in the world. The closer a guess is to the actual location, the more points they win.

In his videos, Rainbolt runs through GeoGuessr at breakneck speed, spending five or six seconds on a round. 12) ..... Rainbolt says his speedruns are just how he plays the game — but it also happens to fit perfectly on TikTok, where attention spans are short. As a finishing touch, Rainbolt plays a recomposition of Vivaldi's "Winter I" in the background to make sure "you're glued in."

"I love the irony behind making Google Maps intense," Rainbolt said. "Because it's like 'Oh, this guy is a professional Google Maps player.' I have to own that, right?"

GeoGuessr, the browser game behind Rainbolt's videos, is nearly a decade old. A Swedish software engineer, Anton Wallén, first published the game as a pet project in 2013. 13) ..... You can also play GeoGuessr free, but only for five minutes at a time. The subscription fees help the company pay Google, which charges them for accessing their maps software, said Daniel Antell, a co-founder and chief executive officer for GeoGuessr. Antell declined to say how much the deal with Google costs, but added the company spends "tens of thousands per month" to keep the site up and running.

Rainbolt doesn't want to be seen as some geography "whiz-kid," though. Roadways, like maps, give some sense of direction. 14) ..... That's how Rainbolt can guess where he is.

It can be easy to overlook those small details when you first play a game of GeoGuessr, but that's what serious GeoGuessr players study to progress in the game. And when it comes to dirt roads, the color of the soil, the size of the rocks, even the fences that line the road help Rainbolt form "educated guesses".

Rainbolt isn't sure what he'll do with his newfound TikTok fame. He's planning to take it "day-by-day," and absolutely wants to keep making videos riffing off GeoGuessr — maybe even some other videos around travel. 15) ..... After more than a year of playing GeoGuessr, he wants to visit Svalbard, an archipelago off the coast of Norway, or travel to Laos to see the limestone peaks in Vang Vieng. There's just one problem: his passport is expired.

Task 3. Put the sentences (A-G) where they should be in the text (11-15). You have two extra sentences.

- A. All told, it took him five seconds to identify the approximate location.
- B. The paint on the road, the bollards, the various street signs and the telephone poles are different country by country.
- C. By comparison, some GeoGuessr players on YouTube will take upward of 30 minutes for a five-round game to get as close as possible to the answer.
- D. Nowadays, GeoGuessr is a 30-person company based in Stockholm, supported by a subset of users who pay $2 a month to play as many games as they want a day.
- E. Professional GeoGuessr players — so described because they are the best in the world, not because they earn a living doing it — say the competitive scene is still nascent but growing rapidly.
- F. That said, besides a cruise taken when he was growing up, Rainbolt has never left the U.S.
- G. However, Rainbolt is not the best GeoGuessr player; that distinction is often considered to belong to a Dutch teenager who goes by GeoStique, or to a French player known as Blinky.

Task 4. Look at the words in bold in the text. Guess their meanings IN THE CONTEXT. You have two extra meanings.

- 16) to own something
- 17) to riff off something
- 18) to be glued in

- A. to admit mistakes
- B. to embrace and exhibit something about oneself with confidence
- C. to take a new creative direction
- D. to use an idea as a basis for a new variation
- E. to be unable to stop watching something

Task 7. For questions (33 – 38) guess the word from the rebus or a visual clue.

A word of the week

Language is a living organism and it tends to reflect all the changes that occur in our lives. For example, words regularly appear in language that reflect new phenomena and concepts. Some of them stay with us, and some of them disappear over time. Many major linguistic centers conduct studies on the emergence of new words and even hold polls to identify the word of the week.
