On the Terrace by Boris Kustodiev

The Artists's Life	• Russian and Soviet painter and stage designer • Born in Astrakhan (1878 – 1927) • 1896 – 1903 attended Ilya Repin's studio at the Imperial Academy of Arts in St.Petersburg • The artist penetrated the complex world of human soul creating portraits Illustrated books: Nikolai Gogol's Dead Souls, The Overcoat; Leo Tolstoy's How the Devil Stole the Peasant's Hunk of Bread and The Candle. • Designed stage scenery at the Moscow Art Theatre.
The History of the Painting	• His painting On the Terrace oil on canvas created in 1906 (exhibited in Nizhny Novgorod State Fine Arts Museum) • Depicts the artist's family (his wife Yulia, his children and their nanny, also his elder sister and her husband)
The Theme of the Painting	• It seems to the viewer that he has become a witness to a quiet family meeting, most likely even an ordinary dinner in a country house. • Summer green background gives a reason to feel the warm breeze, swaying white curtains of the open window. • The wooden house becomes a symbol of the hearth, and the yellow polished samovar, around which families have always gathered. The painting embodies love of home. • Small children and caring adults, hot tea on the table and good weather are all you need for a relaxing evening with your loved ones.
Cultural Value of the Painting	• One of the most iconic paintings representing national Russian tea drinking culture • A deeply lyrical and light work • Striking in its realism. A genre scene • Every family member portrayed as an individual possessing idiosyncratic features. All united by mutual love, respect and affection.
